PRIMARY REFERENCE LAB CHANGE TO QUEST DIAGNOSTICS

Effective Date: November 19th, 2025

Corewell Health and Quest Diagnostics are beginning their collaboration to provide excellent, affordable diagnostic testing with improved access for our patients. As part of Quest assuming the responsibility of the day-to-day management of our hospital-based operations Corewell Health Laboratory will transition to Quest Diagnostics as its primary reference testing laboratory. With this change much of the testing currently being sent to ARUP, Mayo Clinic, and Viracor will be referred to Quest Diagnostics to be performed. Some testing will continue to be performed at other laboratories to ensure our patients and clinicians are well-supported. Please read below for important information regarding these changes:

- Tests that Corewell offers that are currently performed at ARUP and Mayo will be cross walked to a comparable test at Quest Diagnostics.
- Some tests with very low utilization or deemed to no longer have clinical utility by Corewell will be discontinued.
- All tests will be given a new LAB number that will have to be updated in foreign EMR compendiums.
- Collection devices may change.
- Transitions to Quest are scheduled for three dates prior to the end of the year.
- 11/19/25 and 12/3/25 will primarily affect testing currently referred to ARUP.
- 12/17/25 will primarily affect testing currently referred to Mayo Clinic
- Crosswalks between current and future state testing will be provided to prepare for the change.
- The Lab Test Directory for your specific region will be updated as these transitions take place. Resources will be provided links to the Quest comparable tests for each go-live.
